Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was given a great ovation in Champaign this afternoon, when thousands of people gathered at West Side park to hear him talk, on his first visit to the twin cities. People from far and near, stood many deep around his automobile and his path to the band stand to get a look at the famous Rough Rider and to bask in his smile.

The colonel passed through the crowd, hat in hand, amid the cheers of the assembled populace, gathered together, regardless of politics, color, or sex. The special police had difficulty in keeping back the crowd and, the colonel had to elbow his way through to the stand where he was to
